Visible Women

Caroline Criado Perez has spent years investigating the gender data gap – and how women are simply forgotten in a world designed for men. Her best-selling book, Invisible Women, was published to critical acclaim, and Caroline was inundated with readers sharing their own stories of the “default male”.

In her brand new podcast Caroline investigates what happens next: how can we close the gender data gap and design a world that works for everyone? Caroline will hunt for missing data, get in fights with manufacturing companies, and find the people who are working to close the gender data gap. You'll hear expert guests, gripping stories, and plenty of inspiration.

'I Am Not A Label' by Cerrie Burnell

Former CBeebies presenter, Cerrie Burnell, is passionate about increasing the visibility of disabled people through her work as a writer, actor and presenter. Her latest book I Am Not A Label goes a long way in breaking down the stigma surrounding disabilities.

This stylish biography anthology profiles 34 artists, athletes, thinkers and activists with disabilities, from past and present. Featuring figures as diverse as Frida Kahlo and Peter Dinklage (from Game of Thrones fame), Cerrie celebrates how they overcame obstacles in their life and owned their differences, in this uplifting, stunningly illustrated read. Including a section on hidden disabilities as well as a glossary of terms to help explain some of the conditions covered in the book, this is a powerful tool in helping to educate children on disability.
